AFFAIRS IN BROOKLYN.

ROBBERS CAUGHT WITH THEIR PLUNDER THE PRISONERS BELIEVED TO HAVE COMMITTED MANY BURGLARIES.

In two arrests made yesterday by the detective force it is believed that the men responsible for the recent burglaries in clothing, shoe and other stores have been captured. Detectives Ryan and Rahl have been at work upon the cases for some time, and they got track of a man named John McAvoy, alias McKenzie, alias "Coffee Jimmy." He was caught yesterday afternoon driving a wagon over the Wallabout bridge, and in it was found a quantity of undertakers' supplies, which were stolen recently from the shop of Miss Hattle Fernbacher, of No. 110 South Eighth-st. At the same time a horse and wagon were taken from No. 108 South Fighth-st. With McAyov was a man named Thomas With McAvoy was a man named Thomas Shanley, of No. 424 Gold-st., a truck driver, who has borne a good reputation. He ran away when the detectives stopped McAvoy, but he was afterward found in New-York and arrested. He owns four horses, and

The method followed by the thieves in robbing the store in South Eighth-st. was similar to that adopted in numerous other robberies, and it is believed that the prisoners have committed a number. When a place was broken into a horse and wagon would be stolen near by to carry off the property. McAvoy is a lailbird, and has "done time" in the Kings County Pententiary. He professes to live at No. 430 West Thirty-sixth-st., New-York, but is believed to live in Catheriness.

CHARGING OFFICIALS WITH EXTRAVAGANCE.

Dr. Herbert G. Lyttle, of Long Island City, yesterday asked Justice Bartlett for an injunction restraining the Water Board of Long Island City from laying 11,000 feet of mains by day labor at $2 a day, on the ground that the city charter provides that all work costing over $100 shall be done by contract. He says that the City Treasurer has already paid $3,000 to the laborers, and that it will cost from $7,000 to $12,000 more to complete the work at that rate, whereas it ought to have been done for $2,000. The motion was opposed by Corporation Counsel Foster, of Long Island Be contended that the Water Board had a right to do the work as it was doing it, since it had the consent of the Common Council, according to Chapter 100 of the laws of 1879. The case was cut short by the question asked of the plaintiff by the court, "Have you filed to bond!" The plaintiff had not filed the bond as the law requires. Therefore Justice Bartlett taid that the case must be began over again.

nvict at the Hudson County Penitenilary, at Snake Hill, made a third desperate attempt to escurhis liberty on Thursday afternoon. He is Frank Dugan, and he was sent to the penitentiary for one year for entering school-houses in Bayonne and stealing school books. Dugan is a desperate convict, and Warden Grimes made him drag a heavy ball and chain, which was attached to an iron belt. This punishment was inflicted because of two attempts he had made to secure and Dugan, with the rest of the men working in the quarry, was about to be marched into the penitentiary, Dugan managed to clude the vigilance of his heepers, and he entered a building which projected a few feet over the Hackensack River, and slipped into the water. In some manner he secured a board. Dugan rested the iron ball and chain on the board and pushed out from the little house. He is a powerful man and a good swimmer, and he swam hard for liberty. He struck out for the opposite side of the river, which is marsh land, covered with grass six and seven feet high. Had he got to this marsh he could have concealed himself until dark and filed off his iron belt at letsure, for the keepers believe a confederare supplied him with a file. Dugan miscalculated the strength of the tide, and the current rapidly carried him down the stream. Dugan, after he had served three months of his time, one night, with a broken pair of shears, cut through the brick walls of his cell and through the wall of the prison. Less than two months after this Dugan again cut through his cell, and had nearly effected his escape from the peutientiary, when he was discovered and confined in a dark cell.
